JULY IS UV SAFETY MONTH

The skin is the body's largest organ so it is important to know how to protect it. There are simple, everyday things you can do to help protect your skin from the harmful effects of UV radiation.

- Wear proper clothing such as long-sleeved shirts and pants. Be sure to protect your head and eyes with a wide-brimmed hat and UV-resistant (99 to 100% blocking of UV rays), wraparound sunglasses. Don't forget to protect yourself on cloudy days as well.
- Find the shade and avoid sunburns. Stay out of the sun, especially during peak burning hours - between 10am and 4pm. If you must be outside, don't forget the wide-brimmed hat, long sleeves and sunglass.
- Beware of reflective surfaces, like water, sand and even the windows of a building. These can increase your chance of sunburn even if you're in a shady spot.
- Be cautious when in higher altitudes as you can be exposed to more UV rays because there is less atmosphere to absorb them.
- Generously apply broad-spectrum sunscreen to all exposed skin. The FDA recommends using sunscreens that are broad-spectrum and have a sun protection factor (SPF) of at least 15. Apply at least 20 minutes before going outside.
- Don't forget to re-apply sunscreen throughout the day, every two hours, especially after swimming or sweating, even on cloudy days. A full day outing (six hours) could require one whole tube of sunscreen.
